

Student Social Responsibility

The students are the backbones of the world. They are the pillars of tomorrow. It is important that they are socially responsible and serve the society. They must be involved in social services. The basic sense of sharing should be built-in within the students because sharing gives fruitful yield.

"Today we are making a difference for tomorrow".

Student social responsibility mainly focuses on taking responsibility for ~~one's~~ one's own actions. It is a premise everyone should make for the society while working for the social, cultural and ecological causes. These responsibilities are ethically binding and propose that each person acts in such a way that minimizes the adverse effect to those immediately around them.

Students who demonstrate social responsibility are

- active
- caring
- responsible
- collaborate effectively with others
- demonstrate a strong sense of community
 - kind mindedness
- take actions to support diversity and the environment.
- show respect for everyone's rights
- demonstrate empathy
- have a sense of ethical care as they develop relationships and consider different perspectives

Development of social responsibility begins within families before entering formal education. It is expanded and enhanced at every stage of life and schooling. At each stage, students maintain and enhance competencies from previous stages, while developing new skills.

Students move from demonstrating social responsibility in relatively simple and highly supported situations, to demonstrating increasing independence in more complex and varied social and environmental contexts.

They accept generational roles and responsibilities. The development of competency in social responsibility does not end with school graduation, but continues to develop in personal, social, educational and workplace contexts as adults and collective responsibility for the good of society.

Responsibility of Students

- attending classes on time and regularly
- being prepared for classes with all necessary supplies
- taking good care of school property
- completing all homework assignments
- organizing their time well
- respecting themselves and others
- reading on a regular basis
- doing their best

Be a Volunteer

There are many projects launched by government and NGOs to support different social causes like creating awareness for importance of education, finding shelter for the homeless, looking after the sick people, spending time with old age people.

One can be part of any of them. It consumes less time and brings a feeling of contentment after giving time to something that is selfless.

"The best feeling of happiness is knowing you're the reason of others' smile"

Contribute to make a difference

You can always donate things that are no longer use to you. Rewind a little, and you will find a number of things that are just sitting in your room adding onto nothing.

Eg: Books, notes, assignments, gadgets, Study table, etc

Also, you can turn to the local people to collect the books and other items.

Condene any form of bullying

'Pulling someone down will never help you reach the top'

'Bullying leads people to commit suicide'.

The majority of young adults who committed suicide could have been saved if help had been offered to them. Rescuing a young adult or teenager is possible with the right type of awareness and education.

If you see anything unethical happening around, raise your voice against it instead of ignoring it and moving on as if you saw nothing.

Follow ethics.

Ethical code helps in understanding the difference between 'right' and 'wrong' and in applying that understanding to your decisions.

For example, if you are given a chance to take up an opportunity that could be really beneficial to you, but it may result in a loss to your fellow people, would it be a fair to grab it?

Being just to your morals is the prime social responsibility. After all, you are the one you are answerable to.

Some student responsibilities:

- Following traffic rules, and make your parents do the same because they would listen to you out of embarrassment but not because it is needed.
- Make sure that garbage meets dustbins on a regular basis.
- It's very important that they inculcate the habit of helping others. And by helping, I am not saying only through money, help can come in any form. It's just the will of a person who wants to help.
- Ensuring that not even a single girl is harassed in front of their eyes. Raise voice. Don't be a spectator, be a hero.
